ADIOS AMIGOS, ADIOS OUR FRIENDS

Moving on to New Horizons

This month we say goodbye to two of our most integral families. Martin and Mari Cilliers together with Mari's sister Magdalena, have made the difficult decision to return to SA to take care of their aging parents. Anton and Henza are moving on to greener pastures, or shall I say colder pastures. They're off to live in Oregon! Their two sons, Christian and Walter will remain in the Bay area for another year or so, finishing up school and tying up loose ends.

On behalf of the many South Africans who have come to know each of you, we want to wish you all of the very best of luck and happiness. As they say in the classics... adios is not goodbye. We hope to see you all again in the not-too-distant future, if not in person, then definitely by email, Skype, webcam, etc.

Martin and Mari Cilliers

Martin and I say goodbye to our South African group that we have been a part of since it's inception in 1995.

We have lived here since 1985 and for the first 10 years we had very little contact with any RSA's .

I could not believe my eyes when at the very first braai there were over 400 ex RSA's from this area!

The ladies coffee evenings have been so very much fun and appreciated. One evening of just being yourself, where everyone knows what you are talking about and even understands your accent. Noleen has been such a godsend to so many of us and has opened her home to so many of us. She has given us advice and laughter and hope.

I have met so many wonderful people through this group. Please do not let it die out. It is necessary for us to be connected, especially here in the unknown.

Those that have been here awhile need to continue help those that are new.

I have enjoyed making the melktert even though it is a lot of work. We have enjoyed the laughs and the jokes and advice in the Braai News - thanks Sharon. I will miss it and will try to find it online. Family matters take us back to South Africa, though we would have loved to have stayed here forever. The American people accepted us with warmth. We will miss Chris and Steph's Old Year's celebrations — thanks! To all our ex-South African friends we say goodbye, vasbyt, enjoy, and hope to see you in heaven. In the meantime e-mail us at martinflorida@hotmail.com or marisafari@live.com.

Anton and Henza de Wet

To all of our many friends here in the Tampa Bay area, our thanks for the years of friendship. We are moving to Portland Oregon the end of May. We look forward to seeing some of you before we leave but if we miss you, "may God be with you 'till we meet again."

Anton and Henza de Wet

Pies... Easy Pies... Now You're Talkin'!

EZ Piez is a business truly born of the saying "Necessity is the Mother of Invention". In a difficult economic climate especially for new immigrants to the USA from Africa it seemed easier to start a small business than find a job in my field which was in the building industry. Coupled with that fact that two cold winters without a meat pie was more than we could bear! From the humble beginnings of our home to kitchen and with the help and encouragement of friends and a gracious American "benefactor" family EZ Piez has now moved into a premise in Sarasota.

Our flavors have been specially designed to cater to both our faithful South African, Aussie and Kiwi patrons as well as endeavoring to serve customers from our newly adopted home, America. While we are still in the process of setting up our new business, websites etc, we are in our new premise at 6609 Superior Avenue, Sarasota, FL 34231, licensed and taking orders for frozen pies. We can deliver to the South African braai on May 30th and can be contacted on 941-993 0780.

Beads & Things Galore...

What do you do with a gazillion beads, baubles and charms? Why, you sprinkle about 7 South Africans among them and there's your recipe for success. This thriving (not so little anymore) internet business is based in Gulfport, Florida.

Primitive Earth Beads was started by Ray Dykes 17 years ago (at age 60, nugal) with just a few trays of beads in the back of a van. The business has now grown into a 4,900 Sq foot warehouse. Primitive Earth Beads is a supplier of natural, ceramic, crystal, FIMO, metal, semi-precious and glass beads, as well as beautiful fashion chain, metal castings, charms, findings and supplies for making your own jewelry.

Graham Dykes and Wendy Oberholzer, Ray's son and daughter, now run the business while Ray can sometimes be found cruising the Bahamas in his 40ft sailboat. Although at the moment he's not sailing, just working on the boat. Way to go Ray!! Perhaps we'll even get to see you at the Braai :)

In recent years, Graham and Wendy have travelled to China on buying trips bringing home an exciting foray of color, texture and technique. They also attend bead shows throughout the country plying their wares and honing in on new ideas. And when Graham isn't slaving over a hot computer, he can be found surfing in Nicaragua.

Both wholesale and retail purchases are welcome at the Primitive Earth website which is designed and maintained entirely in-house by Kelly Warren . So, if you're looking for some new inspiration, check out their website www.primitiveearthbeads.com. You can also find them on FaceBook. Google it! And get those creative juices going.

To Sleep, Perchance to Breathe

by Philip Naudé
philip@naude.us

I have no doubt that these words will ring true for some that read this. I have sleep apnea; sleep apnea as Webster dictionary defines it is: "...recurs during sleep and is caused especially by obstruction of the airway or a disturbance in the brain's respiratory center." Which essentially means that you stop breathing during sleep until your brain wakes you up.

I have always been a loud snorer. I have been told of times that I woke people two rooms over. I was blissfully unaware of the window shaking caused by that night time vibration of my soft palate. I had a good excuse; I was asleep at the time. My brothers and I have always joked that if sleeping were an Olympic sport, we would be world champions. For something that takes up one third of our lifetime, we really should pay closer attention to how it affects our waking hours.

About two years ago, I started noticing that I would always wake up exhausted. I tried to going to bed earlier to get extra sleep, I tried to catching up on sleep on the weekends, but nothing worked. I kept dismissing it as something that would self correct, but it did not; it just kept getting worse. I felt like a thick haze was hovering over me. Finally, I knew something had to be done when I was driving to work and I closed my eyes for a second while sitting at a red light then all of a sudden I was startled awake by horns honking behind me: I had nodded off momentarily.

I went to my primary care physician and explained my problem. He scheduled me for a sleep study a few days later. At the sleep study they put all types of electrodes all over my body and head to monitor how much and how well I would sleep. I thought I did OK, compared to the quality of sleep I normally got. However, the following morning when I asked the technician how I did, his answer sent a chill down my spine: "Not good." he said.

About four days later, I received a phone call from my primary care physician who referred me to a pulmonologist; a doctor who specializes in treating diseases of the lungs and respiratory tract. I was able to go see the pulmonologist the following week. All the time I was still in this constant haze that affected my mood and especially my short term memory. I was irritable; I couldn't remember things that my wife just told me a few seconds before. It had become a real problem because it was affecting my work and causing a disruption of my day to day life.

At the examination the pulmonologist looked over my test results and examined my airway. Being overweight aggravated my condition, but the pulmonologist told me that neither losing weight or surgery, would help decrease my snoring. It was simply a matter of the shape of my airway. Then she explained why the technician at the sleep study center was so grim. The average person has a blood oxygen level of 95% to 100%, 50% would be, in her words: "...incompatible with life." She further explained that my lowest level during the study was 31.4%. I was stunned to say the least. Not only was I not getting any quality sleep, I was getting NO true sleep, and insufficient oxygen to my brain when I tried to sleep. I had 185 obstructive events with an average of 32 events per hour. Which means I stopped breathing 32 times an hour, or every 2 minutes.

A second sleep study was scheduled; this time I would be hooked up to a machine that would test the settings needed for a machine that would push air into my lungs while I slept to assist my breathing and to keep my airway open. It's called a Bi-Level Positive Air Pressure (BIPAP) machine and it has become my new best friend. It senses your breathing and pushes air in at a higher pressure when you inhale and a lower pressure when you exhale. It truly is amazing how well it works. I was a bit hesitant and thought that the mask that fits over my nose would be cumbersome and the pipe from the machine would interfere with my sleep. But I found that placing the pipe over my head and tucking it under the edge of the pillow gave me freedom of movement and did not interfere with my ability to sleep comfortably. Besides, dealing with that has been a small price to pay for true quality sleep. I immediately noticed that I was more alert when I was awake.

Every Friday evening after work Van der Merwe would braai a big, fat juicy steak. But his neighbors, being Catholic and therefore reluctant to eat meat on Fridays suffered agonies of temptation as the delicious aroma carried on the evening breeze.

They persuaded their priest to try to convert Van. Success! Van attended mass and the priest sprinkled holy water over him and said, "You were born a Protestant, raised a Protestant but now you are a Catholic."

Everybody was delighted.

But when Friday night came the wonderful aroma of grilled steak again wafted over the neighborhood.

The priest rushed into Van's garden just in time to see him clutching a Small bottle of holy water and sprinkling it over the grilling meat and chanting, "You was born a cow, you was raised as a cow, but now you is a Snock!"

How Fights Start

I asked my wife, 'Where do you want to go for our anniversary?' It warmed my heart to see her face melt in sweet appreciation. 'Somewhere I haven't been in a long time!' she said. So I suggested, 'How about the kitchen?'

And that's when the fight started...

I tried to talk my wife into buying a case of Miller Light for $14.95. Instead, she bought a jar of cold cream for $7.95. I told her the beer would make her look better at night than the cold cream.

And that's when the fight started...

I took my wife to a restaurant. The waiter, for some reason, took my order first. 'I'll

Life is a Theatre...

~ Invite Your Audience Carefully~

Not everyone is healthy enough to have a front row seat in your life.

There are some people in your life who need to be loved from a distance!

It is amazing what you can accomplish when you let go of, or minimize your time with those draining, negative, incompatible, 'not-going-anywhere' relationships or friendships.

Observe the relationships around you. Pay close attention...which ones lift, and which ones lean?

Which ones encourage, and which ones discourage?

Which ones are on a path of growth uphill, and which ones are going downhill?

When you leave certain people, do you feel better or feel worse?

Which ones always have drama, or don't really understand, know or appreciate you & the gifts that lie within you?

Remember that the people you have around you will have an impact on your life, your values and your income. So, be careful when choosing the people you hang out with, as well as the information with which you will feed your mind.

We should not share our dreams with negative people, nor feed our minds with negative thoughts.

The more you seek quality, respect, growth, peace of mind, love and truth around you... the easier it will become for you to decide who gets to sit in the FRONT ROW, and who should be moved to the balcony of your life.

Ask for wisdom and discernment, and choose wisely the people who will sit in the front row of your life.

You cannot change the people around you... but you CAN change the people you choose to be around!

Who is in your front row?

Immigration Update

Investing in the US:

A Solution for South African Immigrants

by H. Ronald Klasko

The U.S. immigration system has traditionally not been an ideal fit for South African businessmen and investors who want to relocate to the U.S. Many countries have investment treaties that enable their nationals to obtain treaty investor visa status and promptly relocate the U.S. based upon their investments. South Africa does not.

Happily, there is now a solution for wealthy South Africans who want to immigrate to the U.S. The solution is called regional center EB-5. Very popular in Asia, this program has only recently come to the attention of the South African community.

This program enables a wealthy foreign national to obtain a green card with an investment in a government-approved regional center project. The advantages of this program are that the investor does not need to be employed, can live anywhere in the U.S., can relocate his family, can buy property and can travel internationally.

Here's how it works: The U.S. government has approved about 80 regional centers, which are business models or development projects in specified geographical areas and industries that economists certify will create significant employment. Examples include hotels, office buildings, condominiums and limited partnerships providing credit to cash-starved enterprises. The investor must invest $500,000 (or $1 million in some of the regional centers), which usually cannot be returned for at least five years. The money must be utilized in a project that is projected to create, directly or indirectly, at least ten full-time jobs for U.S. workers for every investor in the project.

Assuming all of the legal requirements are met, the investor is able to obtain a U.S. green card – often in one year or less. This green card is conditional and has a two-year validity. As a conditional permanent resident, the investor is free to live in the U.S. year round or travel in and out of the U.S. However, he must maintain a residence in the United States. Before the end of the two years, the investor must file a “Petition to Remove Conditions” to prove that the investment has been sustained and that the investment project has actually taken place. Upon approval of the conditional resident’s removal petition, the investor gets a permanent green card.

At the same time the investor obtains a green card, his spouse and any unmarried children under the age of 21 can also obtain green cards. With these, the spouse and children can work, study or travel as they wish.

In addition to financial and tax advisors, the investor is well advised to work with a U.S. immigration attorney who is experienced in dealing with regional center EB-5 cases.

Our website, www.eb5immigration.com, provides a wealth of information regarding this program. Anyone who wishes to schedule a consultation to discuss this program and whether it fits his or her own individual needs can also request a consultation through this website.

They Got The Message!

Well it looks as though Julius Malema's racial comments and anti-white anthem could not be contained to Southern Africa.

A recent hush from the head of the Youth League of the ANC has come after his most controversial performance to date. At the ANC headquarters in Johannesburg on April 8, fresh from a visit to Zimbabwe, Malema hailed Robert Mugabe's "resilience, courage, forthrightness and dedication" and the "progressive vision" now leading to "a peaceful and successful Zimbabwe." Heckled by a BBC correspondent, he called the reporter a "bastard" and "bloody agent" in the grip of a "white tendency." He then vowed to keep singing the antiapartheid anthem "Kill the Boer" even after the April 3 murder of farmer and white-supremacist leader Eugene Terre'Blanche. It was all too much for South African President and ANC leader Jacob Zuma, who called Tourists arriving in SA for the World Cup Soccer came prepared with their "Please don't kill me, I am only a tourist, not The Boer" T-Shirts.

Malema "totally out of order." On May 11, the ANC fined Malema $1,300, and ordered him to attend anger-management classes and apologize publicly to Zuma. In a written statement, Malema did so and vowed henceforth to "reflect respect and restraint." Time will tell!

I was able to concentrate at work, and relax at home. I was no longer forgetting things, or feeling as if I was living in a haze.

I ended up purchasing my own machine online from secondwindpap.com after I was laid off and lost my health insurance. They were the only place I found that sold "Gently used" BiPAP machines. Mine only had 30 hours of use. This machine has made a world of difference in my life, I wake up refreshed in the morning after about 7 hours of sleep. I have never been a morning person, but getting up in the morning now is a breeze. My wife loves it too because I no longer snore which means she gets good quality sleep now too. As I look back on my life I realize that I have always had apnea to a varying degree but never knew it.

I hope that if you read this and you know someone that is a habitual snorer (like your spouse) that you will suggest they have a sleep study done. For me, as my ability to sleep dramatically improved so too has my quality of life.
